Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to apply for the Business Analyst position. I am a final-year Management Information Systems student at the University of Transport Ho Chi Minh City (GPA 3.64/4.0), and I am currently a Business Analyst intern at Saigon International General Hospital and the Public Transport Management Center (MCPT).

At MCPT, I led a 40-member student team to build a bus pass issuance system for citizens. I interviewed MCPT staff, modeled the processes in BPMN, wrote the SRS and user stories with acceptance criteria, and coordinated UAT before handover. At the hospital, I built the first dashboard for corporate health check contracts from scratch, so the CEO and the FP&A team can see where each contract and payment is waiting. These experiences taught me that a good Business Analyst listens carefully, asks the right questions and checks every detail.

I know that I still have a lot to learn, and that is exactly why I am applying. I hope to learn from experienced analysts, work on real products and real problems, and grow step by step. I learn quickly, I am happy to start with small tasks, and I always try to finish what I start with care.

If I am given the chance, I will do my very best to contribute to the team and to improve every day. My case studies are available at dohoangphuc.vercel.app. Thank you sincerely for your time and consideration. I would be grateful for the opportunity to talk with you.

Sincerely,

Do Hoang Phuc
